First edition published in 1860. - Van Hoëvell asked for a voluntary discharge because he had been branded as 'suspect' in the Dutch East Indies. He wrote a pamphlet dealing with these events, but also based one of his novellas on them. It is called 'The Suspects', written in 1858, and was included in his volume About life in the Indies (Uit het Indische leven, 1860). It is one of his best works, and has remained relevant to this day. At once recognizable is the pattern it describes of an authoritarian society (Nieuwenhuys, Mirror of the Indies, p.62).

The cultivation system began to be dismantled in ca. 1850, initially because of a hostility in the Netherlands, under the new more democratic constitution of 1848, to the favored position of the sugar contractors and the NHM, and later because of growing interest in larger scale private interest in the Indies and because of political indignation over the oppressive practices linked with the cultivation system. The Agrarian Law of 1870, which formerly abolished forced cultivation, is generally regarded as the end of the cultivation system. This study is against the renovation. Cat. KITLV p.76.

Christiaan Snouck Hurgronje (1857-1936) was a famous Dutch scholar of Oriental cultures and languages and Advisor on Native Affairs to the colonial government of the Netherlands East Indies. 'He knew more about Islam than the best-informed Muslim and more about colonial government than the Colonial Office itself, and many an opponent was antagonised or even silenced by his vitriolic criticism'.

With Snouck Hurgronje (1857-1936) a new chapter begins in Dutch Islam scholarship in general and the study of Indonesian Islam in particular. .. In spite of all the criticism, no one intending to seriously study Islam in Indonesia will be able to avoid reading Snouck Hurgronje's work and consulting them again and again' (Boland-Farjon, Islam in Indonesia, p.16-17). The collected works is an authorised edition with corrections by the author. It includes all his publications until 1927 with the exception of his largest monographs.

The official eye-witness report by lieutenant Kempees, aide-de-camp of Van Daalen during the famous, carefully prepared, expedition to Aceh, Sumatra. The expedition was successful and Kempees' book is known for its accurate information. The expedition was carried out with such ruthlessness that public and parliamentary opinion turned against military policy in Aceh. (Cf. P. van 't Veer, De Atjeh-oorlog p. 267-269). Photographs were taken by Henricus Marinus Neeb (1870-1933), a Dutch military doctor during the later stages of the long lasting Aceh War. He photographed sights in the area beginning in 1904 including architecture, indigenous peoples, colonial buildings such as rail infrastructure and buildings, topography, scenes of Dutch soldiers, and Acehnese killed in the conflict. *Cat. Extracted from Commelin's collection of voyages. - Published for the first time in the Begin ende voortganh was Jan Sas' description of Admiral Steven van der Hagen's first voyage to the East Indies, 1599-1601. Sas' journal describes Van der Hagen's attack on the Portuguese at Amboina and the building of a Dutch fort there - the first Dutch fort in the East Indies. Commelin appended two other journals to Sas' account: one describes the voyage of two ships to Aceh in 1600-1601 and ends abruptly with the capture of the commander and several crewmen by the natives. The other, written by Reyer Corneliszoon, describes Admiral Jacob van Heemskerck's voyage to Sumatra in 1601-02. None appears to have been published elsewhere (Lach & Van Kley, Asia in the making of Europe, III,1, p.465).

Extracted from Commelin's collection of voyages. - Financed by Bathasar de Moucheron, Van Spilbergen's three ships left Verre in Zeeland on May, 1601. From May 30 to September 2, 1602, the fleet was anchored at Batticaloa on Ceylon while Van Spilbergen and his entourage negotiated a treaty with the king of Kandy. Between September 16, 1602, and March 30, 1603, they were in Aceh negotiating with the sultan and hunting for Portuguese ships. In February, 1603, VOC ships arrived in Aceh and Van Spilbergen's fleet joined them. After spending most of the summer of 1603 in Bantam, Van Spilbergen returned to Vlissingen on March 24, 1604 (Lach & Van Kley, Asia in the making of Europe, III,1, p.443-444). Proceeding around the Cape he named Elizabeth Island (= Dasseneiland) after his wife, and entered and named Tafel Baay (=Table Bay) after the flat-topped mountain overlooking it (Howgego p.987).

First edition; with bookplate of Drukkerij , Binderij F.B. Smits, Batavia-Noordwijk. - Interesting account based on information and reports collected by De Stuers (1788-1861) when he was military commandant and resident of Padang between 1824 and 1829. He left the colony after a conflict with the governor-general about the expansion of authority in Sumatra. 'Veth published the book because it clarified a little-known episode in colonial history. In Veth's view, it underscored the need for the Netherlands to concern itself more actively with the administration of the Outer Islands. In an annotated introduction running to over a hundred pages Veth reviewed the history of Dutch military action on Sumatra' (Van der Velde, P.J. Veth, p. 119).
